That's life!
Playing hard to get?

What should I do?

Edward a konyhában van és az ablakból látja Jack-et, aki a kertben joggingol.

Edward: Jack! Jack, I was waiting for you. Have you got a minute?

Jack: Sure Edward! What's up? Do you wanna put some muscles in your film? (Megmutatja az izmait.)

Edward: Oh, Jack, you're quite a joker! I need some advice... About a rather delicate matter... Well, it's about women.

Jack: Oh, well, then you've come to the right person. When it comes to women, in all modesty, I'm sort of an expert. Go ahead, shoot! But make it fast, I have to get to the gym!

Edward: Oh, well, don't worry, it's like this: if a woman lets you mysteriously know that she's keen on you, and if you didn't expect it, but then you find that you don't mind the gesture... In fact, because of this, you find that you are becoming fond of her. And if she acts as if nothing has happened...

Jack (meglepődve): What, what, what, what, what... Edward! What are you getting at? I don't understand! Is this a new idea for a film? Because if it is... You should think about rewriting this script. It seems very convoluted to me.

Edward: Oh Jack, stop joking. It's a serious matter! I just don't know how to behave... I can't stand this situation...

Jack: Well... Okay! Let's take this from the top. So, a woman goes for you. However, she doesn't do it openly. But then she pretends as if nothing has happened. And, as far as I can tell, you don't dislike the idea. Have I got it?

Edward: Exactly! So, what should I do?

Jack: Well, the fact is, her behaviour leads me to believe that she's fond of games. So, use that. Play the mysterious man. And then surprise her with something special. You know, like... Take her out to dinner or... Write her a poem or... Send her some red roses. Women really go for that kind of thing!

Edward: Really! I got an idea. (Kimegy.)

Jack: I'd really like to meet this mysterious woman. What she sees in him is beyond me...

(Edward és Alice együtt vannak a nappaliban. Edward a diványon ül és TV-t néz, míg Alice szemmel láthatóan unatkozik.)

Alice: Edward... Edward! Edward?! Would you mind not watching the TV for a moment? I'd like to have a word with you!

Edward: Is it important, Alice? "Ciak!" is on. That reality programme about show business. You know I'm nuts about this show!

Alice: Yeah, yeah, I know! It's about the only thing you go for...

Edward (Lekapcsolja a tévét, bekapcsolja a videokamerát és elkezd felvenni Alice-t): What's up Alice? What's bothering you?

Alice (felkel és kikapcsolja a videokamerát): Edward, I'm sorry, I didn't mean to be rude! It's just that... I has something... I mean, anything particular happened recently?

Edward (döbbenten nézi): Oh, well, if I have to tell you the truth, yes.

Alice: Ah! Great! So, what?

Edward: So, what? What are you getting at? (Hátralép.)

Alice: Who, what did you think about it? Were you pleased by it?

Edward: Oh yes, very much! (Zavartan.) But, why we are talking about such embarrassing things!?

Alice: I think you should talk about it, Edward. Once and for all...

Edward: You think? You know me... I don't... I'm not good with words...

Alice: Well, then get into action! I think you've already waited long enough...

Edward: Maybe you're right! I'm a klutz, aren't I, Alice?

Alice: Mhm, yes! But you can fix it!

Edward: I'll surprise you! By the way, Alice, have you decided what you're going to wear for our date yet?

Alice (boldogan): Our date? Are you serious, Edward?

Edward: Sure, our date with Mr Martin, the television producer.

Alice (kiábrándultja): That date...

Edward: Have you forgotten?

Alice: No, don't worry. I haven't forgotten about it! (Felkel és kimegy, egyedül hagyva Edward-ot, aki azonnal visszakapcsolja a televíziót.)

That's life!
Life's full of surprises

The moment of truth approaches!

Edward a nappaliban van, bekapcsolja a videokamerát és úgy helyezi el, hogy a képernyőn az asztal látszik, rajta pedig a vörös rózsákkal teli váza.

Edward: Great, this spot should work well! No, (arrébb teszi a rózsákat), maybe here it would be better! And I'll put the card here next to this! Let's give it a quick once-over again... (Kinyitja a borítékot, ami a virággal együtt érkezett, és elkezd olvasni a benne levő kártyát.) "Anne, I should have done this long ago! Now, I can't wait any longer... Listen to my poetry written especially for you... You are perfume, the colour of all flowers, the breath and scent of the sea, the warming strength of the sun, you, the shining star that lights my life". Who knows if she'll like it... And what about these roses? Will she like them? And what if she makes fun of me? Perhaps I shouldn't have listened to Jack! But of course, of course... It makes no sense to go on as if nothing has happened. Somebody has to take the first step! (Tovább olvassa.) "I'll await you tomorrow night here in the living room, when everyone is asleep... We'll be able to be alone, finally alone". Okay, that is done. There's nothing more to do now but wait! Anne'll be home soon... Thank God Alice won't be here at least for two hours. And Jack is at the gym, yes, I calculated everything perfectly! Now it's time for me to leave as well, I don't want Anne to see me here...

(Zaj hallatszik a szomszédos szobából. Anne az, aki épp most ért haza.) Here she is! It's time to go! Excellent, great Edward... The moment of truth approaches! They'll never call me an amateur again! (Kinyitja a teraszajtót és kimegy a kertbe. Az ajtót nyitva hagyja.)

(Anne belép a nappaliba, miközben a mobilján beszél.)

Anne: Right, fine. Bye bye! (Leteszi a telefont. Észreveszi a nyitott ajtót.) Always the door open! Allowing the cats to come in! (Észreveszi a virágcsokrot és az asztalhoz lép.) Oh, what are these? For me? Oh, they're beautiful! I wonder who's sent them... (Kinyitja a borítékot és olvasni kezdi a kártyát.) Oh, what poetry! Who could have written it? No, no Anne... What are you thinking... No, don't be silly. It can't have been Jack! Oh my God! Then again, he's the only person I can imagine who would have written such lovely poetry! Oh my God... Oh, what if it were Jack? Now that Sharon is out of the picture... Who would have ever thought that... That one day... Oh, Jack!

(Anne a fürdőben van, boldog, sminkeli magát a tükör előtt. Belép Alice.)

Alice: Hi Anne.

Anne: Hi Alice!

Alice: My! Aren't we feeling chirpy today?

Anne: Yes, we are feeling chirpy! I've just received a mysterious and completely unexpected surprise!

Alice: So... What is it? What's all the suspense for?

Anne: I'm sorry Alice. I'd like to keep it a secret for the time being! There's something I have to check up on first. But don't worry, I'll tell you soon enough! Now, why don't you tell me how it's going with Edward? By the look on your face, I would guess things aren't going very well!

Alice: You said it! A complete and utter disaster! I should have never written that card!

Anne: Why? What's the matter?

Alice: That's the problem! Nothing has happened! Edward acts as if he had never read that card! And yet I know he read it! I'm absolutely certain of it!

Anne: Why are you so sure?

Alice: Well, he told me in no uncertain terms. I fished around, vaguely. And he admitted that something strange had happened. And he also said that he was very pleased... And then nothing. No words, no actions. At this point, I think he was referring to something else entirely! Or else, I just have to accept the fact that... He isn't interested in me!

Anne: Oh, don't get depressed, Alice! If you want my opinion, I think you should have told him in person. Face to face is always better than playing games. At any rate, you've still got time. Why don't you sit down and have an earnest word with him?

Alice: No way! To be embarrassed further? Anyway, there's something fishy about this whole story! Either Edward is acting like a complete fool, or else he hasn't truly understood what I feel for him... I need some clarity! From now on I'm going to scrutinise his every move!

Television Programmes

Music: The Royal Opera House, London

Lucy: Hello and welcome to this week's edition of "Music World". And of course welcome to our music expert, Tony Moore.

Tony: Hello Lucy and good morning to all our music fans.

Lucy: A great cultural icon with a very difficult recent history, a popular TV programme broadcasting these problems to a whole nation and today great performances to packed houses. I'm talking about the Royal Opera House at Covent Garden in London. The theatre dates back to 1732 but recently it's become more famous than ever. What exactly has been happening at The Royal Opera, Tony?

Tony: Well, everything started with the restoration work that was begun in 1995. This work has now been completed and we have the modern performance space that it is today.

Lucy: I can't see any trouble there.

Tony: Sure, but the restoration work was partly funded by the national lottery.

Lucy: What do you mean "partly" funded, how much money came from the lottery?

Tony: The lottery gave £58.5 million towards the work.

Lucy: Quite a lot of money! Remind me how the lottery works.

Tony: Lottery tickets cost £1.00 and are sold all over the country and there's a big draw once a week.

Lucy: Ok, so the Royal Opera House received £58.5 million from the lottery, what happened next?

Tony: The restoration work was completed in 1999. Tony Blair's labour government had given the Royal Opera this lottery money on condition that it made opera less elitist in the future by keeping some of its seats reasonably priced for citizens earning an average wage.

Lucy: Did they do that?

Tony: Yes, but let's not rush things. In 2001 the Royal Opera became even more famous when the BBC filmed a "fly on the wall" documentary about the day to day running of the place. The programme showed a real life soap opera in action. During this period the theatre was chaotically managed and was almost out of control. Five executive directors left in the space of five years. There was on-going conflict between management and employees. And the Royal Opera suddenly found itself at the centre of the political debate about the funding of the arts in the UK. Many people asked whether opera wasn't too elitist an art form to receive funding from the government.

Lucy: Why? Is the running of the Royal Opera completely funded by the government?

Tony: No, but it does rely in part on the government, 31% of its funds come from government subsidies. Today corporate sponsorship is becoming more important. In 2006 this amounted to nearly £16 million. Of course the rest of the funds come from ticket sales.

Lucy: I see! And then? How does the story end?
Tony: The BBC documentary programme was a great success, it had a huge audience. The TV project wasn't so successful for the Royal Opera management as it entered a period of financial crisis. And there was an enormous amount of criticism because of the high cost of the renovation work and because of the BBC TV documentary which showed that the place was managed very, very badly.

Lucy: And today?

Tony: Well, after so many years of difficult times the Royal Opera is newsworthy simply because it isn't! For the last five years the Royal Opera has been putting on successful operas and ballets. It's been doing a fine job. What's more the Opera House has kept its promise. Now it's attracting new audiences to listen to opera and some of the seats are reasonably priced.

Lucy: How much do the tickets cost?

Tony: The top price for a performance is usually £180 but half of the seats cost £50 or less, but the cheapest seats cost less than £10. Of course, they're not very close to the stage but they are the cheapest grand opera seats in Europe. On an average evening 48% of the audience is watching its first opera.

Lucy: So, a wider range of people are watching opera now in London.

Tony: That's right, after a very difficult period the Royal Opera is now running smoothly.

Lucy: Another soap opera with a happy ending. So thanks Tony.

Tony: Thanks, goodbye.

Lucy: And goodbye to all our music fans.

Travel:

Volunteer holidays

Lucy: Hello and welcome to this week's edition of "The Travel Programme". In the studio with me once again is Christine Oteng, our travel expert.

Christine: Good morning everyone.

Lucy: Well, what does the word "holiday" conjure up in your mind? White sand beaches, beautiful blue sea and fantastic seafood? Or maybe cool mountain air and invigorating walks through Alpine forests? How about this... Think helping to build a dam outside a village in Uganda, think helping out in a rural hospital in India, think showing visitors round a castle in England... That's right, today's travel topic is volunteer holidays, a way to travel and do good at the same time. Am I right Christine?

Christine: Right! A volunteer holiday can be a true life-changing experience. Travel, visit new places and help local people at the same time. It's a great way to really make contact with local people, their culture and the kinds of problems they face and you can help, in a small way, to solve some of those problems.

Lucy: Certainly a holiday with a difference. What sorts of places have volunteer holidays?

Christine: There are two kinds of volunteer holidays really. A lot of these holidays take place in developing countries: in Africa, India and sometimes in South America. Other holidays can be found in Europe and North America. So there are lots of destinations to choose from.

Lucy: And what sorts of things can you do?

Christine: There's an enormous range of activities to choose from. In the developing world a lot of the work is based around helping on infrastructure projects, so you may help to dig a new well or build a new footbridge or perhaps a children's playground. Or you may decide to help out in a local hospital or in an orphanage. All sorts of useful projects to improve the daily lives of local people in small ways.

Lucy: And what about the work in developed countries?

Christine: Well, here the work is slightly different. It's usually for charitable organisations like for example the National Trust, an English charity that looks after many castles and old houses. It also owns many areas of beautiful countryside. Anyway, it's possible to do lots of interesting things for the National Trust.

Lucy: What, for example?

Christine: As you mentioned earlier, helping to show tourists round a castle in the summer. There is a beautiful fifteenth century castle on an island off the north east coast of England, Lindisfarne Castle. Well, they're looking for a couple to do this job for a fortnight.

Lucy: Ok, I'll think about that! But do you have to pay for these activities?

Christine: Yes, of course you have to pay! Volunteer holidays in developing countries tend to cost more because travel costs are higher and some of your money will go to help the local community.

Lucy: In this way you help poor people twice! Just one question Christine, during volunteer holidays do you have to work all the time?

Christine: Well, usually there's a split between volunteer work and sightseeing. For example during a fortnight's holiday to Africa you may spend the first week on your volunteer work and the second week visiting game reserves, relaxing, shopping. The sorts of things you normally do on holiday.

Lucy: Good. So you have time for fun too. Ok everyone, the next time you're trying to decide where to go on holiday, forget the beaches, forget the mountains and start thinking about leaving your comfort zone for Africa or the English countryside! Thanks Christine for that fascinating information.

Christine: Goodbye.

Lucy: And of course goodbye to all travellers.
